Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. As residents of a state with extensive coastline and as moderate consumers of fish and other forms of seafood, my family will be affected by any changes in current policy. To this end, please consider how such changes affect our fisheries further down the road.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The recent deaths and illnesses of sea otters is just another indication that our impact on the ocean's ability to provide a healthy ecosystem is negative. Please, look long term to ensure that habitat and fisheries are productive not just next year but 20-40-80 years from now. Thank you for your time considering this searious problem.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

In light of recent reports indicating the world's oceans and coastal regions are becoming degraded at an alarming rate, I urge you to use your office and influence to help slow and even reverse this devastating trend.

All of life depends upon a healthy ecosystem. The oceans are a critical part of the great circle of life. I strongly urge you to take a stand against the special interests and do what is right in support of reclaiming the oceans and coastal regions.

Overfishing, habitat destruction and pollution are threatening the seas and coastal regions like never before. The argument that jobs are threatened is hollow, especially since jobs will be meaningless when the earth can no longer support life.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I know there are powerful forces pushing you to decrease the protection offered by the existing laws. And these factions can be very convincing in their arguments to modify current standards. "Just a small change is all we ask", they will say. "We're trying to protect the environment, too", they plead.

But let's be honest. Industry and their political allies in the White House are motivated by profit. Their claim that we can improve resource extraction and still protect the oceans is false. Either we commit to protecting the seas now, or we allow them to die.

I represent the silent majority of Americans who deeply care about protection of the environment. You probably don't hear from us as much as the lobbyists and their Republican allies, but we have supported environmental protection from the start. Did you ever hear of a public backlash because of environment protection? No, you haven't. But you certainly hear the vocal complaints of developers, corporations, and industry lobbyists when their profit is threatened.

Please don't let short-sighted policies of the present threaten the future of our seas. You must stand up within this administration and fight for what is right. The people of this country are behind you on that!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We need to set up more "ocean parks" or off-limits area for fishing. If such areas are large enough, many fish can make a sustainable recovery. As it is, in some countries, fishing is a dying occupation unless one owns a factory fleet which destroys everything in sight, including destruction of the ocean floor habitat.

We find it amazing that people are willing to catch that last fish. After that, then what?

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Coastal marine habitats are a vital part of a balanced ecosystem. Abuse of these balances can affect commercial fishing and tourism and for a much longer period. Mexico's Gulf of California and the Baja Peninsula is a clear example of eco-system abuse and its eventual disastrous outcome. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The oceans are a tourist habitat and nobody wants to relax near a cesspool.

The coast is also a tax base habitat and needs to be protected to maintain property values.

I do not live at the Ocean nor do I own property there. Lets start controlling human impact on our increasingly fragile Ocean's and their Coastal Zones.

Healthy Ocean behavior modifications should have been initiated, monitored and vigilantly policed more than twenty years ago. Lets not ignore the problems any longer.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

It is clear we need those in a position to protect fragile ecosystems contained in our oceans to take a stand for what is right and do so immediately.

I live in San Pedro, California, right next to the Port of Los Angeles, and I know what the impact of human activity has on the coastal environment, not to mention the environment as a whole. As you may know, no part is separate from the whole - if you degrade one part of the environment, the entirety is degraded.

Specifically, the cruise industry needs to be held to strict guidelines regarding dumping of their waste into our oceans. They cannot be relied upon to follow the rules and regulations that they claim to abide by, and I know this from personal experience.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans are an extremely valuable resource that we must protect for our own well being. Billions of dollars come out of the ocean and into our economy mostly through commercial and sport fishing. We NEED to protect our oceans so we can protect the life that relies on them- which includes Americans. We cannot weaken existing ocean protections for special interest groups, while it can negatively impacts the rest of the country. Thank you for considering my comments.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As you know, California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am writing to urge you to protect our oceans and to strengthen existing essential fish habitat guidelines for this and future generations.

I am particularly concerned about worldwide increases in fish consumption and rising levels of toxic substances found in marine food fishes, while worldwide populations of these essential foods are rapidly declining.

Pregnant women and children are particularly vulnerable to these high levels of toxins, while their bodies and diets would best be suited with adequate amounts of healthy, uncontaminated food fishes.

Wouldn't it be tremendous if our oceans once again teemed with fish as described in written accounts by John Smith when he first entered the waters of the Atlantic off our coast?

Please help return our waters to a state of healthy existence. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Anne Grogan

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Please don't let special interest groups weaken existing ocean protections!

I am very disappointed in how little focus has gone into any sort of environmental causes during this presidential term. The environment is a very important issue to many of our nations citizens and I hope that the Bush Administration will at some point step up to the plate and realize this. It seems like we as americans only want to fix what we immediately see on a daily basis. If we don't use it or see it why put the money into fixing it, well eventually it will all affect us and we will have no healthy place to live or fresh natural foods to eat.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We can no longer afford the luxury of spoiling our own food sources. Please have the spirit of doing something good and care for those fellow inhabitants that cannot speak for themselves. Creation was not put here for man's sole use but rather for each creature to live out its life. We as humans must be stewards of all that surrounds us. Stand up to this horrible administration and support all that is good.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I live about an hour from the Oregon coast, and am reminded constantly about the overfishing and pollution issues that are happening on our shorelines and others.

Protecting existing and essential fish habitats is crucial to stop these problems, and to help those areas recover to a healthy state.

This is important for the fish and marine wildlife as a whole - but it's also critical for our fishing industry. Many Oregon families depend on a healthy fishing environment to make their living. If we do this right, we can meet both needs successfully.

I URGE you - please protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Coastal habitats are threatened by multiple factors, both human and natural. If we do not protect essential fish habitat, we will lose vital resources both for humans and the many important interacting species in the oceans. We are all affected by the health of the oceans. Healthy oceans are crucial in keeping the reliability of the world's food supply, a strong economy, recreational pursuits, and a liveable climate. Please do your part to help us keep our oceans healthy today and into the future.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections.

I urge you reject special interests and to continue to protect our oceans. I ask that you do not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We need to take responsibility for the pollution, over development and general mismanagement of our marine habitats that protective legislation can assist with.

I am a Floridian who has watched the decline in our shorelines health over the past thirty five years. Once flourishing canals are now dead from commercial fertilizers and development issues. I could go on and on sighting examples of irresponsible behavior of citizens and industry in relation to our aquatic resources, especially oceans.

Please, continue to protect these valueable resources.

Thank you for the attention you have given my request.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Fishing yields are declining due to over-fishing and methods that destroy crucial population balances by collecting indiscriminately. The ability of the ocean to support life is being threatened by run-off pollution in coastal areas and airborne pollutants in rainwater world wide. Dead zones are growing even in areas that are the focus of existing environmental cleanup efforts. Please do not make a bad situation worse.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The health of our oceans and the vigorous protection of marine habitats should be among our highest national priorities. Already, degradation of marine environments and depletion of fish stocks are at levels presaged by 1950s-era science fiction writers. It is not hard now to imagine nightmare scenarios in which the oceans are reduced to terminally polluted highways, with everything below the surface either dead or dying. This is not the time or the place for short-term thinking in the face of corporate interests. Instead, we should call for, indeed expect, inspired leadership and stewardship in the name of generations to come. If anything, existing protections should be strengthened, not weakened.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. As I am currently studying in Buenos Aires, Argentina, I have had several opportunities to observe the beauty of our earth's water and also the pollution affected upon them. The Atlantic Ocean is a beautiful place, but in many places, too polluted to swim in. Although there should be an abundance of fish in Argentine waters, there are many warnings out not to eat them because many are endangered. Please make an effort to change this and protect our natural habitat and wildlife in the U.S.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The oceans are any incredibly important ecosystem, essential to the healthy functioning of our planet. It is easy to overlook them from our perspective on shore. But as Director of Habitat Conservation, it is extremely important that you act as steward of the marine habitat, as well as terrestrial. Please don't listen to the fishery special interests trying to convince our administration to weaken protections on our oceans.

Thank you.

I was listening on the radio and heard that there is a new report on the oceans. I would like to know your response to this landmark study that paints a very demoralizing picture about our future survival. There are very alarming data regarding the health of the oceans. I would like you to rise above all partisan politics here and recognize that this is crucial data that needs legislative initiative from legislators like you. Please consider the importance of protecting our oceans and our future. We cannot weaken any existing habitat restrictions with such alarming data suggesting a shortcoming on existing practices.

Disgusting things are dumped in the ocean everyday. That is like dumping toxic waste in a public swimming pool.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. This isn't a matter of industry vs. environmentalists. No corporate profit margin can save us, including the corporations, from the ravages on our environment. There's just no way out of stopping the degradation of the environment, other than taking ALL THE NECESSARY STEPS! It is to the point where we have NO OTHER CHOICE!

As a planning commissioner in a coastal town, I can attest first-hand to the impact that crashing fisheries have had on the fishing segment of our economy. Far better that we endure the loss of harvest for some years, and retain the productivity of the oceans for future generations. Please do your part by approving additional restrictions that will permit the fisheries to recover from the insult of years of abuse. Whatever you do, please do not weaken existing regulations!

I look forward to learning what actions you plan to take.

As a biologist for the PRBO Conservation Science, I walk the beaches of the Point Reyes National Seashore every day from March through September. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

California's ocean environment no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Due to overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution there is now an alarming decline in the health of our oceans. Marine life and delicate ecosystems are seriously threatened.

Under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, essential fish habitats are currently protected under federal law. However, the National Marine Fisheries Service is currently considering making changes that would weaken the existing protections.

I urge you to protect our oceans and strengthen, not weaken, existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I live on the beautiful Monterey Peninsula in California, an area which is a worldwide Mecca for its many attributes and offerings, including California's two finest state parks, the Monterey Bay Aquarium, a bird count which is one of the three highest in the nation, a fishing industry; it is often called the Golf Capital of the world, and our nearby Salinas Valley is known as the Salad Bowl of the world---I could go on and on.

Yet, even as I write this, we are experiencing an ever rising number of Sea Otter deaths in our bay. Our scientists can find no other cause than the gradually increasing pollution in our bay and oceans. As sea otters are extremely sensitive creatures, they are our first indicators of problems to come.

Not only should regulations on the pollution of our waters not be eased, they must be made much more stringent.

I implore you to do whatever you can to stem the tide, even to reverse the existing damage.

Thank you,
Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Though I am a registered Republican, I do feel that many natural habitats need to be protected from human invasion.

As humans, we are the dominant species. However, we need wilderness and wildlife...and we will simply and quite naturally populate and dominate every nook and cranny of the earth if we do not regulate ourselves.

America (especially California) remains a decent place to live, in large part, due to the national and state parks, and the ocean. These bits of wilderness only continue to remain beautiful due to controls exerted by the government. Such controls should not be weakened.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am writing to urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Just this week, the U.S. Commission on Ocean Policy reported that pollution, overfishing, and poor management have put North America's oceans in serious peril. The Commission recommends setting up a special office at the White House to oversee a new, coordinated policy; doubling investment in scientific research; and strengthening the ability of the government to police polluters and fisheries.

Clearly, the weight of scientific evidence points to the need to strengthen, not weaken, protections for essential fish habitat.

Thank you for considering my comments,

Our oceans are dying. Global warming is a fact whether we wish it to be or not. we are killing habitat through everything from over fishing to run-off, to transporting invasive species through bilge water.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, excessive runoff and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Incredibly, special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I live in San Diego and I'm glad that we are getting more cruise ships into our port, but I also worry about damage they may be doing to our bay and ocean. I saw on the Oceana web site how damaging such ships can be. Obviously, we need strict standards to protect the environment. Please help ensure the health of our oceans.

I urge you not to weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sincerely,
Lana Fayman

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Instead of relaxing current standards, please keep these protections and do more to help continue to protect the oceans.

America can not afford to continue to cave in to special interests and the Bush Administrations blatant disregard for the environment.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Thirty years ago I dived for abalony on the Callifornia coast. Today one can stll dive but the abalony are almost gone
Why are all the fish going away?

Sincerely,

Paul Jarvis

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The oceans contain our most important resources because they sustain so much life. Prevention of pollution is easier than costly cleanup which is most times actually impossible.
